of visitors, as this would. Norfolk's location, adaptability to such gatherings and superior railroad advantages make it a desirable place to meet and it is perhaps her fault particularly that more have not been held here. The smaller towns have and are entertaining like affairs and Norfolk has not had her share. The question of whether or not Norfolk wants this entertainment must be decided at once. It is understood that the business men will be called upon and given a chance to show what they are willing to do in this matter and THE NEWS hopes that they will show themselves strongly in favor of it.

Shout the Cyclone.

The Scientific American tells how an Oklahoma town is protected from cyclones and waterspouts which may be a valuable pointer for those who fear these disturbances. It is suggested that the money put into the construction of cyclone collars might be expended for the purchase of artillery and the employment of a company to man it. This is what the Scientific American says:

"On June 15 a waterspout was seen sweeping toward the town of Hennessey, Oklahoma, and for the third time this year it has been saved from destruction by artificial means. One of the Rough Riders, John Rhoades by name, bought four old cannon, in Cuba, and the citizens of the town purchased them, and the city council employs a man to attend to them. When a water spout or cyclone appears on the horizon, he mounts his horse and rides to one of the cannon, which are placed on the outskirts of the town, one on each side. The cannon was loaded with salt, and was fired on June 15, at forty rods range, into the whirling black mass that threatened the town with destruction. The city is protected by this means at a trifling expense, and so far it has always worked satisfactorily."
